

Positive Peace Coordinator - Sydney, Voluntary Internships

You are looking for invaluable experience in the headquarters of a world leading think tank and being part of driving innovation and having a global impact. You have excellent research skills, the ability to manage projects end-to-end and deliver results on time.

The Institute for Economics and Peace (IEP) is the world leader in positive peace and systems thinking approaches to it and we are developing plans to ensure we train more than 1 million people on it. Positive peace is defined as the attitudes, institutions and structures that create and sustain peaceful societies. These same factors also lead to many other positive outcomes which society feels are important. Positive Peace has been empirically derived by IEP via the statistical analysis of thousands of cross-country measures of economic and social progress to determine what factors have a significant association with negative peace.

During this voluntary internship you will be responsible for developing a range of proposals as an integral part of the IEP Project and Grant Design Team. A clear role description will be developed with you and tailored for your skills and availability. It will involve distinct projects for which you will be responsible.

You will be mentored by the Chief Operations Officer, Alistair Gee, and have the opportunity to learn from and be supported by many experienced staff in our research, outreach and communications departments.

The role is flexible in hours, length and the possibility of working remotely when you require.

To apply for this position, please email Alistair Gee at agee@economicsandpeace.org with a covering letter addressing your skills and competencies and your resume. There are multiple positions in this Positive Peace program and applications will be considered on a rolling basis. Please contact Alistair (agee@economicsandpeace.org) if you have any queries.
